An Evening Echo.

Men are neither suddenly rich nor suddenly good.—LIBANUS.

Dickey versus Reed.

There is great satisfaction among public men at the national capital over the news that the Republicans of Missouri have nominated a substantial business man of demonstrated ability as a candidate against Senator James Reed, who has made himself few friends and no admirers by his long-winded harangues without any constructive legislative results. Reed is one of the most persistent talkers in the Senate.

On both sides of the chamber there will be rejoicing when Walter S. Dickey succeeds him.

Workers know, too.

The car strikes in New York and Philadelphia and the threatened strike on steam roads serve to emphasize the fact that wage earners are not misled by the sort of prosperity we have been enjoying.

While they have been getting somewhat increased wages, this has been accompanied by much higher prices, also due to the war, and the workmen are coming to the conclusion that it is only a temporary revival and that they were not getting their share in the benefits.

Free-Traders Shocked.

The free trade Democrats in Congress suffered a severe shock a few days ago when they read the trade report from Great Britain for the month of July. This shows that imports into Great Britain increased only $5,000,000 while exports increased $50,000,000.

Democratic leaders have been arguing all the time that we have no need to fear a trade war after the military conflict in Europe has ceased, but reports such as this will very quickly cause the rank and file of the Democratic party to lose confidence in the assurances given by their inexperienced leaders.

Minnesota in Line.

Among the recent visitors to the national capital was former Congressman Fred C. Stevens, of Minnesota. Speaking of the outlook in his state he said:

"If the Democrats ever had any idea of carrying Minnesota, they have abandoned it. The only question is the size of the Republican majority. The entire national and state tickets will be elected. Frank B. Kellogg will be chosen United States Senator. I look to see Mr. Hughes get a tremendous majority, for he is very popular with the voters of our state. Minnesota will be back in the Republican camp with the old-time majorities."

Shameful Story Revived.

Probably there is no feature of the Hughes campaign that gives President Wilson more concern than the criticism of his appointments to the diplomatic service. As soon as he came into power, President Wilson proceeded to turn out of office the men who had devoted many years to the consular and diplomatic service, many of them having risen to high positions at important posts as a result of efficient service in lower places.

Turning out the incumbents would not have been so bad, if their places had been filled with men who had some degree of qualification for the work. As a matter of fact, most of the men appointed were men entirely without experience in either diplomacy or foreign business. One of them was a Texas farmer—and doubtless a successful farmer. Another was a preacher who had been serving rural parishes for thirty years. He was quite likely a successful country preacher, but he acknowledged that he knew nothing about the work of a diplomat. These appointments were made at the beginning of the Wilson administration and were much criticized at the time by the Civil Service Reform League, a non-partisan organization, but President Wilson has been hoping that the matter had been forgotten. Revival of the shameful story will undoubtedly cost Wilson the support of thousands of men and women who desire efficiency, especially in the service upon which we depend for national respect among the nations of the world.

Hughes on Labor.

Mr. Hughes as governor of New York frequently gave expression to his sympathy with the constructive work done by labor organizations. Speaking on August 29, 1908, at the dedication of the Tuberculosis Pavilion erected by the Central Federation of Labor at Albany the governor said: "My friends, there are some who regard organized labor as a source of strife and menace of difficulty. I regard it as a fine opportunity for the amelioration of the condition of men working with no other purpose than to make the most of themselves and to achieve something for their families. I regard it as a fine opportunity for the realization of the highest benefits for those whom every patriotic citizen feels most solicitous about to see that everything should be done for their continued progress."

"Under wise leadership, with statesmanlike guidance, with a sincere intention to promote the benefit of the community and to secure honorable progress, the movement of labor organizations is one of the finest that any association of men could guard. Today we have a realization of what can be accomplished."

"We have entered into a campaign which requires the cooperation of all in the community to stamp out this great white plague. By the mitigation of improper conditions of labor, by the decrease of hours of labor, by securing better administration of health departments and wider legislation with regard to the conditions of tenement houses and with reference to many preventable nuisances for the workman. But what is done each year only points out what is to be done the year following."

"There is a great movement in this country from one end to the other, a movement of progress that is not sectional, that is not intended for the benefit of this or that particular man, selfishly considered, that is not controlled by any set of men, but is for the improvement and the progress of humanity, because all our decent citizenship is determined that every abuse that can be corrected shall be corrected and that every man shall have a fair chance in this country."

Democratic View of Chilton.

The Beckley Messenger is one of the prominent Democratic weeklies of the state. Speaking of Senator Chilton, whom it declines to support, and his political "deceit"—the so-called "Northwest claim"—it says:

"Give the devil his just dues, but no quarter for hypocrisy. After six years in the United States Senate the people of the state of West Virginia are to be confronted this year with a campaign based on illusion of the state securing some $15,000,000 from the United States government by reason of the federal government having acquired certain properties years ago in which West Virginia is supposed to have an interest."

"Senator Chilton has been in the United States Senate now practically six years; a member of the Senate judicial committee, and yet has gotten this matter in no better shape than to use it this year as a pretext why he should be returned to the United States Senate. He should be indicted for laches if nothing else, by the people of the state. West Virginians are inclined to give credit and extend credulity where something substantial and effective has been done, but become disgusted with hot air and will-o'-the-wisp stunts to perpetuate office seekers at the pleasure of the voters."

"This Northwest claim of $15,000,000 is more or less a decoy to catch the unsuspecting voter. It is a make-believe to a great extent and much like the Virginia debt, an opening for the state to spend the taxpayers' funds. In Illinois only to wake up several years hence and find we have again gotten the hatchet in the neck. It would augur much more to Mr. Chilton's prospects of returning to the Senate had he the $15,000,000 now to West Virginia's credit. At any rate, if $15,000,000 is procurable on the Northwest claim Howard Sutherland will not let any grass grow under his feet to secure it. He has been very diligent in other matters and there is no reason to presume that he will be equally so in this. It is the man that does things after all that counts."

Some men when your money's free, Shake your hand effectively. When it's gone, you wonder whether, They will shake you altogether.

The philanthropist paced his study, his brows knitted in thought, his fingers crocheted in vexation.

"I have come to the end of my rope!" he muttered, tearing up a thousand dollar bill and throwing it spitefully out the window. "I have given to every charity under the sun and some over it, such as the plan to communicate with the planet Pluto. I have endowed libraries, soup kitchens, hospitals, free saloons for the relief of wives of drunkards, everything anybody else ever endowed and thousands of my own invention. I am still worth thirty millions and every charity has been attended to!"

And he burst into tears.

Suddenly he started up, and a wild light of joy came into his old eyes.

"I have it!" he cried. "I will endow a fund for indigent philanthropists who have wasted their substance on endowing charities!"

And chuckling through his tears, he sat down feverishly to write the first check.

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY IS PRAISED BY O'CONNELL

Who Denies Catholics Give Only a Divided Allegiance to the United States.

(NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Praise for the religious liberty enjoyed in this country and a denial that Catholics here "give only a divided allegiance and are scheming for government" were voiced by Cardinal O'Connell of Boston, last night in addressing the opening session in Madison Square Garden of the convention of the American Federation of Catholic Societies. His theme was "Our Country."

"If because a citizen is a Catholic a thousand plausible pretexts are set out to discredit him and discredit him in your cabinets and courts, you are not keeping your contract; this is not liberty," he said. "If you stand by inactive while under your very eyes, yes, through your very hands, which we pay for, we are insulted, scorned, maligned and openly vilified, then you are not keeping your contract—that is not liberty."

"You are only wounding the hand, the strongest hand held out to help you; you are spurning the aid of those who again and again you have found in your hour of direst need the most willing to die for you."

"O, yes, we know very well the whole litany of accusations against us. We give only a divided allegiance. We are scheming for government. There are all these so patent that they need no answer. Indeed, those who fling them out will never listen to any answer. But I am going to answer them once and forever here tonight."

"As a cardinal I may be supposed to know what I am saying on this subject. And on my word as a gentleman of honor I am speaking the simple and absolute truth."

Knows Whereof He Speaks.

"I have known intimately, personally and officially three sovereign pontiffs—three popes of the Catholic church. I am priest now thirty-two years; I am a bishop fifteen years, and a cardinal five years. I have had the closest relations with not only the pope, but the whole Roman curia. I know well every priest in my diocese, and every bishop in this country. Yet never, never in all that experience have I ever heard spoken, hinted or whispered, or even hinted by any or all of these, anything concerning America and American institutions, but words of affection, of tender and kindest solicitude for its welfare; never a syllable that could not be printed in the boldest type and distributed throughout the land; neither plot nor scheme nor plan—but only sentiments of admiration and love. If there is plotting I ought to know it. Yet absolutely and honestly of such things I have never heard even a whisper."

"This is my answer to all these insinuations. That I know the truth I think no one will deny; that after such a pledge I am still concealing the truth, that I must leave to those who, I repeat, will never listen to my answer."

Points to Europe.

"The Catholic civil allegiance divided? Why, look across the sea, to where all Europe is at arms. Every Catholic is fighting loyally, giving his very life for his country. And though some of these countries have merited little gratitude from any Catholic, still the very priests are in the trenches, each a defender of his native land. Where, I ask of any honest witness of these facts under his very eyes, where is this divided civil allegiance? And the pope—is there one in this country who, after this war, will ever dare to accuse the pope of interference in civil affairs or of weakening the loyalty of citizenship?"

"Behold him, the universal father of the faithful, looking out over the world, and weeping and praying for the peace of all the nations, offering solace and counsel to all alike—a lonely pathetic figure like Christ—begging the world to listen that he may heal all and help all. The world knows the truth today of the position of the pope in relation to all the nations. Not another word is needed."

Love of Country.

"Our country, the land which above all others we love most—God keep you free from such enemies, the worst of all that confronts you, whose hate would rob your most faithful sons of that for which they love you—liberty, true liberty, blessed holy liberty—the freedom to worship God."

Beyond our lives we love our faith, and with these same lives we stand ready to defend the land which gives us liberty. "These are the sentiments of every Catholic throughout the land, these the sentiments of every member of the Catholic Federation of America. It is that these sentiments may be better understood and more widely known that this federation exists and works and strives."

"There is but one thing in all this

AN ABIDING FAITH IN THE REPUBLIC

Cardinal Gibbons Expresses When He Urges Loyalty to the United States.

(NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—James Cardinal Gibbons delivered an address before mass meetings at Madison Square Garden last night, as one of the features of the Catholic Week program of the American Federation of Catholic Societies. He said, in part:

"You live in a republic where is liberty without license, and authority without despotism; and where the civil rulers hold over you the scepter of its protection without interfering with the God-given rights of conscience."

Points Out a Duty.

"In view of the signal blessings you enjoy, it is your duty to take an active, personal, vital interest in the welfare of your country. You should glory in its prosperity, and be concerned at every adversity that may befall it. You should hold up the arms of those who are charged with the administration of public affairs, as the children of Israel held up the hands of Moses while he interceded for them before the Lord."

An Abiding Faith.

"For my part, I have an abiding faith in the endurance of the republic. I might base my hope on the intelligence and patriotism and intelligence of the American people. I might base my confidence on the wisdom of our statesmen and the heroism of our soldiers. I might place my reliance on our standing armies and dreadnoughts. And surely these are all elements of strength to be reckoned with."
